Sustainable Fladbury

Sock sponge scrubbies

When socks get holes and can't be donated, don't throw them away, instead stuff one inside another to make a soft, durable kitchen scrubber or cleaning pad.

- Works great on counters and dishes (especially if you use biodegradable soap).
- Dries faster than a regular sponge, reducing bacteria buildup.
- When it finally wears out, you can compost natural-fiber socks or use the stuffing as plant pot filler.

It turns landfill-bound textiles into reusable cleaning gear which is saving money and cutting microplastic waste from synthetic sponges.
