“Leaf insulation pads” for heat-saving

In November, when leaves are everywhere and temperatures dip, you can actually use dry fallen leaves as natural insulation for outdoor areas that lose heat.

How it works:

Collect dry, clean leaves (avoid moldy or wet ones).

Fill old pillowcases, tote bags or fabric scraps to make leaf-stuffed insulation pads.

Use them to:

- Block drafts at the bottom of doors
- Insulate outdoor pipes
- Wrap around planters to protect roots from early frost
- Cushion and insulate outdoor pet shelters

Why it's weirdly effective:

Dry leaves trap air pockets, similar to down feathers. and you reduce heater use by blocking drafts naturally. Everything is compostable at the end of the season, simply empty and compost the leaves.

TOMBOLA DONATIONS REQUIRED

We're kindly asking for donations of tombola prizes for our stall at the Richmond Village Christmas Fayre on 29th November.

As the event is mainly for adults, a variety of prizes – both large and small – would be greatly appreciated.

Please bring to the school office by Friday 21st November

The block contains the Fladbury PTA logo in the top right corner. At the bottom, there is an illustration of four hands holding red hearts, set against a background of orange leaves.
